The majority of singles in this age group are women, at the rate of three women for every two men, and the disparity grows with age. The plurality is comprised of divorcees, followed by the never married. The Single Lifestyle Singles engage in a variety of activities, but not much different from others in what they do.

Single Parenthood and Children's Well-Being About half of all children born today are expected to spend some time in a single parent family before reaching age 18. Recent evidence suggests that children from single parent families do less well, on average, than children who live with both of their parents. These findings do not mean that ev-

Single Parenthood and Children's Well-being (pdf)

Nearly one half of the children born in this country today will live in a single parent household at some point in their childhood years. The living and parenting arrangements of single parents are as diverse as the individuals themselves. Regardless of their unique situation, however, single parents everywhere face some common challenges.
